She was the daughter of the actor Charles Eastwood. Biography Early life Eastwood was born in Hampstead, London, the daughter of actor Charles Eastwood and his wife, the actress Maude Laverne (née Tayler). She was the great-granddaughter of the actor Charles Eastwood Sr. She was educated at Bedford School. Career Eastwood made her professional stage debut in the title role of his mother's play The Constant Peacock at the Queen's Theatre in 1920. She also worked with her husband in their London home until his death in 1936. In 1925, her brother, the actor Charles Eastwood Jr., was killed in a motor accident and she continued to act with her husband. In 1930, she toured South Africa in the role of Cora in The Constant Peacock with her husband and brother James. In April 1932, Eastwood starred as Millicent Crick in the hit play by J.M. Barrie about Edwardian life, She Stoops to Conquer, at the Garrick Theatre in London. In 1933, Eastwood and her husband appeared as the comedic husband and wife in A Night at an Inn at the Garrick Theatre. She also appeared in The Constant Husband (1934) with her husband. Eastwood and her husband appeared together in several more plays. In the 1936 British crime thriller The Man Who Knew Too Much, which starred her husband as Hugh Walpole, she played Lady Westcott. Personal life Eastwood was married twice. Her first husband was solicitor William Herbert Wilson, who was a grandson of Sir Alfred Beit, 1st Baronet. The couple married in 1927 but divorced in 1935. Eastwood later married George Williams in 82157476af
